TOPIC

Harmonising Operations, Infrastructure and Supply Network Performance

When recurrent operational decision-making is highly dependent on the supply network infrastructure, and the decisions greatly influence the network's performance, novel science-based solutions can be the key. This class of solution has the greatest impact when the operational decisions demand intelligence, insight and supply chain visibility, and when the quality of the decisions is critical. This presentation will include 2 to 3 case studies which, show the supply chain characteristics that drive a need for science-based solutions.

SPEAKER

David Sier
Principal
Scientist, CSIRO Mathematical and Information Sciences

With 15 years experience in industrial optimisation and simulation David Sier has consulted for a wide range of companies and government organisations. His clients include Southern Health, Sth Australian Ambulance Service, Southcorp, Dalrymple Bay Coal Terminal, Ricegrowers Co-operative Ltd, Fuji Xerox, RTA NSW, Cathay Pacific, Holden Engine Company, Dampier Salt, and BlueScope Steel.

David Sier's current areas of consulting and research are in supply chain optimisation with a focus on collaborative and adaptive strategies for improving efficiency in supply chains with multiple, and often competing, players.
