

Dexion – World- Leading Integrated Storage and Handling Systems

Many businesses think of material handling systems as a cost. A procurement issue, a detail for the bean counters, something to be minimised and expedited.

With all the respect in the world, thinking like this is not smart. Thinking like this ignores the fact that every warehouse, manufacturing plant and distribution centre has the potential to unlock productivity, generate profit and deliver competitive advantage.

Dexion can show you how.

We're an Australian company doing business throughout Asia Pacific and the Middle East. For more than 60 years, we've been working with our partners to transform supply chain processes into better ways of doing business.

We provide businesses large and small with solutions to their materials handling problems. We examine the relevant business issues in depth, then apply our critical thinking. With a thorough knowledge of the entire category, from simple storage racks to the most complex integrated systems, our rigorous problem analysis ensures maximum benefits for you.

We're focussed entirely on providing the best solutions. So not surprisingly, Dexion has a rich track record of partnership with not only our clients but other service providers too.

This allows us to not only design and implement your system, but also engineer an ongoing relationship to keep your new processes ahead of the changing business conditions you face.

For clients with responsibilities in different markets, Dexion is fully represented across South-East Asia and the Middle East. Making detailed and personal attention to your needs much easier, wherever they might be.

Dexion was founded in 1947, by an Australian, Demetrius Comino. Mr Comino built the company on three key pillars; excellence in performance, integrity in relationships and innovation in application.

It's a way of thinking that has served our organisation and our clients well for over six decades. At Dexion, we believe they will also serve you well as you face the new challenges in the years and decades ahead.
